2. Met with [REDACTED] who was briefed by Mr. Amory on the route folder program. I undertook, on behalf of CIA,

(1) To inform [REDACTED] on Thursday of existing arrangements respecting the furnishing of NIEs and other CIA intelligence to the Russian Embassy;

(2) In any event, to make available in the office of [REDACTED] 25X1A6a

I explained to [REDACTED] our feeling that reporting from Moscow had dropped off in the sense that we seldom saw round-ups of trends or the intelligence problems that are concerning the Ambassador's staff. I requested that [REDACTED] have such round-ups prepared on some reasonable time schedule (bi-weekly or monthly) and undertook in return to pass on to him round-ups of indications, the trend of intelligence thinking in Washington, and similar reciprocal intelligence services. These would probably be transmitted through [REDACTED] but they would be produced by CIA, which could act much more quickly individually than on a coordinated basis. [REDACTED] appeared to be interested in this suggestion and impliedly undertook to have these round-ups furnished.
